Half court Press determines true identity of Tyson Koehler

Though he has attempted to mask his true basketball allegiances by coming off the bench for a pedestrian mid-major, the Half-court Press has, through Bob Woodward-esque journalistic techniques identified the true allegiances of Southern Utah Power Forward Tyson Koehler. We're talking CSI-style, push zoom and enhance style journalism. The double life of Mr. Koehler have been exposed: he is none other than Utah State superfan Wild Bill.

For those of you who have never heard of Wild Bill, a quick google search of "Wild Bill Utah State" will reveal that he is the 300 pound dancing distraction which Utah State strategically places behind its backboard when the opponent shoots free throws in the second half. For four plus years he has been a mainstay at Utah State home games, but for the past two years his attendance has been sporadic. Though the company line on this intermittent attendance has been "graduation" and "job related activities," we here at the Half-court Press have discovered the true reason: he is really Tyson Koehler (or Tyson Koehler is him).

Southern Utah mysteriously bans box cutters from campus.

Though this move was questioned by many from the school, we here at the Half-court Press feel this was a prudent decision. Our main reasoning is that Freshmen forward John Renfro looks eerily similar to Breaking Bad resident bad ass Gustavo Fring

In other News:

- 85% of Southern Utah students identify their favorite Pokémon as Zapados
- Law firm Laval, Lucas, & Perry dares you to guess who their favorite player is.

Most Importantly: Thank YOU for reading this!

Though the plans for the future of the Half-court Press are currently up in the air (please email us if you are interested in being a part of that future) we must say that we appreciate anyone who has given their time to read our words and thoughts for the past two years. This project was always about producing words, smiles, and basketball fans. If we have made one person smile or chuckle from anything we have made, this has been a success. Thanks for reading and Go Grizzlies!
